had never seen Mr. Bates till this trial began. He knev Annette.

"I lirst met her at Niagara Falls. I saw her in the park there with a Mr. Warrantine. He introduced me to her as his wife." said the witness.

Charles Pratt, superintendent and former manager of the Coach-Horse and Coh Association, teld how, as coachman for Charles F. Bates, he drove his fat master through Central Park in 1889.

"We met a carriage in which the plaintiff was riding with another woman. Mr. Bates nodded and this lady nodded. We passed them twice. Then they met at the restaurant."

Pratt gave a bad reputation to Mrs. Pickett's rond-house, where Charlie and Nana sometimes visited.

The winess had driven Bates there to neet the plaintiff several times. The slace was called "The Willows" from ane to three hours.

Pratt testified also that he had driven Bates and Nana torether to the house mown as "The Palette" in West Fiftyseond street twice or more times in Cotober and November 1889.

Robert Manning, of Atlantic City, a sice young man, benind a big, white anysanthemum, testined in a soft voice hat he maraged a lover-botting establishment. He first met Nana at his sister's flat, 1st West Eignty-first street. The plaintiff had a flat in the same louse.

"The plaintiff used to receive calls from The laintiff used to receive calls from The laintiff used to receive calls from The plaintiff used to receive calls from The Palentiff used to receive calls from The plaintiff used to receive calls from The plaintiff used to receive calls from The Palentiff used to

The plaintiff used to receive calls from the plaintiff used to receive calls from the men. That was inst Fall, said the witness.

Mr. Horwitz objected to the reception of widence of specific acts of immorality on the part of his client on the ground that it was not competent and had no bearing in the question at issue—the marriage of Nana and Mr. Bates.

Judge Freedman admitted the testimony, which was very damaging.

On one occasion, Witness Manning cestified, 'I saw the plaintiff leaning on the radiator at midnight in the hotelitum.

Charlie Bates next took the stand in also own behalf. He said:

'I first saw this plaintiff Oct. 10, 1889, a Central Park. She was riding with da M. Grover or Ido. M. Kidder—I don't show which. She goes by both names. They filtred with me and I finally told them that if they'd drive their victoria to the Mt. St. Vincent restaurant I'd buy the drinks. They went. I followed a my dray. We met behind a curtain and had seven or eight whiskies.

The plaintiff handed me her card, It was not 'Annette,' but 'Nannette' F. McGrath, I31 West One Hundred and Fwenty-seventh street.

Bates said that Annette was known to the fast set as "Harbor Lights, because of a pair of diamonds she wore.
He told about leaving the young woman behind him at "The Pallette and other places they visited because he was "paralyzed," "stiff," "dead frunk" and the like.

"I stayed away from the coach. But I knew my friends would not care to ride back to town with her. At last I had to go to the coach and tell her to pet down.

"She said she'd publish me. Next day the New York papers were full of it."

Bates concluded his direct testimony by stating himself that he had spent a great deal of money fooliship on this woman; that he had nothing left only a ot of debts, and no income except a salary of $25 a week. Her webling ring she bought herself, and the engagement ring, was a hig solitaire, with a lot of laws in it. Bates said. "One of many that he bought on speculation."
